COMING THROUGH THE RYE

One boy's search for JD Salinger

A film by James Sadwith

Based on the life of the Emmy Award-winning filmmaker, Coming Through the Rye is the story of a sometimes hapless 16 yr. old who wants desperately to be a worldly adolescent. Unhappy at his all-boys boarding school, his life raft is the belief that he will someday play Holden Caulfield – the complex and alienated main character from the iconic novel The Catcher in the Rye — on Broadway and in the movies. He adapts the novel as a play and runs away with a local girl to the mountains of New Hampshire to search for the book's reclusive author, JD Salinger. Their odyssey and the events that follow are a journey into the meanings of friendship, sex, love and loss. Academy Award-winner Chris Cooper plays JD Salinger and two brilliant 16 yr. olds, Alex Wolff and Stefania Owen, are the leads.

LOG LINES AND SYNOPSES

A sensitive young boy, believing he is destined to play Holden Caulfield, goes in search of JD Salinger and on the way confronts love, sex and loss. Based on the filmmaker's true story.

Based on the filmmaker's true story, 16 yr. old Jamie Schwartz is desperate to be a worldly adolescent. After stumbling through a series of disastrous relationships at boarding school he runs away. Joined by a local town girl, he travels to the mountains of New Hampshire to search of J.D. Salinger, the reclusive author of The Catcher in the Rye.

Based on the filmmaker's true story, the film - set in 1969 - follows a 16 yr. old Jamie Schwartz (Alex Wolff) who is desperate to be a worldly adolescent. He goes to boarding school for all the wrong reasons. Having a rough time fitting in he adapts The Catcher in the Rye as a play believing he is destined to play Holden Caulfield and runs away with DeeDee (Stefania Owen), a local girl, to search for JD Salinger (Chris Cooper). During his odyssey to find Salinger, Jamie slowly opens up to Deedee and discovers secrets about himself that will change his life forever.

CAST

ALEX WOLFF began his career at age 8 in the 2005 musical comedy film The Naked Brothers Band: The Movie. That film led to the Nickelodian series The Naked Brothers Band which ran from 2007-2009. Alex starred with his brother, Nat, and also contributed lyrics, vocals, and instrumentation. For his work Alex won a Broadcast Music, Inc. Cable Award, and the Audience Award for a Family Feature Film at the Hamptons International Film Festival.

Alex appeared as a recurring character in seven episodes of the acclaimed HBO medical drama In Treatment (2010) and followed that with the comedy film The Sitter (2011). He starred in HairBrained (2012) for which he received a Certificate of Outstanding Achievement for Best Actor at the Brooklyn International Film Festival. In 2013 Alex appeared in A Birder's Guide to Everything. Alex will also be seen in My Big Fat Greek Wedding 2 and the Netflix film Candy Jar. Alex is a native of New York.

STEFANIA OWEN made her acting debut in the 2009 Peter Jackson film, The Lovely Bones playing Flora Hernandez. From 2010 to 2011, she played the character Puddle Kadubic in the Fox comedy series Running Wilde. She went on to co-star as Dorrit, Carrie Bradshaw's younger rebellious sister, in The Carrie Diaries which ran on the CW 2013-2014. Since Coming Through the Rye Stefania has been cast in the comedy-slasher film Krampus, directed by Michael Dougherty. Stefania splits her time between New Zealand and New York.

CHRIS COOPER - An Academy Award winner, Chris has created a host of memorable performances in over 46 major Hollywood films, including Matewan (1987), Lonesome Dove (1989), Lone Star (1996), October Sky (1998), American Beauty (1999), The Bourne Identity (2000 and 2004), Seabiscuit (2003), Capote (2005), Syrianna (2005), The Kingdom (2007), The Town (2010), and The Muppets (2011), The Company You Keep and The Amazing Spiderman (2014).

Cooper won both an Academy Award and Golden Globe for Best Supporting Actor for his role in Adaptation (2002). He played a lead role -- FBI agent and traitor Robert Hanssen in the historical and political thriller Breach (2007). Chris lives with his wife Marianne Leone in Kingston, MA.

ADRIAN PASDAR - Television watchers will recognize him as Glenn Talbot on the Marvel TV series Agents of S.H.I.E.L.D., but Adrian's career started in features with the role of Chipper in Tony's Scott's Top Gun (1986). He went on to appear in Solarbabies (1986), Streets of Gold (1986), Near Dark (1987), Just Like a Woman and Carlito's Way (1993). Pasdar wrote and directed the independent feature film, Cement in 1999 which won Best Picture awards on the festival circuit.

In 1997 Pasdar began his work in television as the title character in the critically acclaimed Fox series Profit. He went on to star in Mysterious Ways on PAX (2000-2002) followed by many starring and recurring roles on shows such as Judging Amy (2003-2005), Heores (2006-2009) and The Lying Game (2011-2013).

THE FILMMAKERS

JAMES SADWITH [writer/director/producer] Although this is his first feature, Jim started out writing and subsequently directing and producing movies, miniseries and drama series for television. His projects have won or been nominated for over thirty-five Emmy Awards and Golden Globes. He has been twice nominated for Emmys and won the Emmy for Best Direction with the miniseries "Sinatra (1992)." In addition he has twice been a DGA Award finalist and once a finalist for the Humanitas Award. Some of the actors he's worked with include: George Burns, Cliff Robertsen, Danny Aiello, Seth Green, Robert Sean Leonard, Dennis Weaver, JoBeth Williams, John Shea, Dabney Coleman, Ann Jackson, Brian Dennehy, Cloris Leachman, Marcia Gay Harden, Gina Gershon, Olympia Dukakis, Rod Steiger, Rosanna Arquette, Josh Hartnett, Randy Quaid, Jonathan Rhys Meyers and James Gandolfini. This is his second time working with Chris Cooper. Jim lives with his family in Woodstock, VT.

STAN ERDREICH [producer] started as Production Supervisor for Chanticleer Films, a subsidiary of Showtime. He went on to Lawrence Gordon's Largo Entertainment as a Creative Executive and later as Manager of Acquisitions and Development. During his tenure Largo produced: Malcolm X, Used People, The Getaway, Judgment Night, Predator 2, Point Break, Unlawful Entry, The Rocketeer, Boogie Nights, Waterworld, Timecop and Affliction. Stan then went on to co-produce The Death and Life of Bobby Z, and co-founded Full Glass Films, a financing entity for independent films. At his company River Bend Pictures Stan is a producer and consultant for film, TV and Broadway projects seeking financing, packaging and development. Stan lives with his family in NYC.

TEDDY GRENNAN [producer] In 2011, Teddy founded the Sun Valley Film Festival and continues to serves Executive Director. He was Executive Producer on Ass Backwards (2013), which had its world premiere at the Sundance Film Festival, and Among Ravens (2014). He lives with his family in Somerset, Virginia and Sun Valley, Idaho.

SARA ELIZABETH TIMMINS [co-producer/upm] Sara Elizabeth is the founder of Life Out Loud Films whose mission is to make inspiring films with strong female characters and that also make a positive impact on the communities where the filmmaking process takes place. In 2012 she produced Lake Effects starring Jane Seymour. She followed that with Wish You Well starring Ellen Burstyn and Josh Lucas in 2013. She lives in Forest, Virginia.

ERIC HURT [director of photography] is an accomplished Writer, Director, and Director of Photography. He has penned and directed feature films, TV pilots, commercials, music videos, and is credited in the Camera Department in countless number of films as Operator and Director of Photography. He owns Pillage and Plunder Pictures, a film and TV production company. Eric lives in Charlottesville, VA.

JACK RYAN [production designer], a two-time Telly Award winner, has designed more than 300 episodes of docudramas for Discovery, TLC, National Geographic and The History Channel. His production design for the indie film Cherry was singled out in a rave review in Variety. Among the other dozen movies for which he was production designer is David Baldacci's Wish You Well, based on his bestselling novel, starring Oscar-winner Ellen Burstyn.

TODD HOLMES [editor] is a feature and documentary film editor based in New York City. Editing for over a dozen years, he's worked on films that have played festivals around the world including Cannes Critics Week, Sundance, Rotterdam, SXSW and Tribeca. In addition to editing, he occasionally writes and directs his own projects, including "Preeti Girl" which won the grand prize in the 2005 Slamdance Screenplay competition, and the short film "Ratana" which played the festival circuit in 2007. Todd lives in Brooklyn, NY.

JAY NASH [composer] - Indie musician and songwriter Nash started playing and writing music in 1998 in NYC. He performed covers in bars on the Upper East Side and Upper West Side, and did sets of his original music in The Living Room, CB's Gallery and subway platforms. He released his first album, Open Late in 2002. Over the last decade, he released another five albums and 3 EPs and journeyed the US and Europe solo, selling over 60,000 records without ever putting ink on a conventional record deal. Jay lives with his family in Hartland, Vermont where he has built his own studio - in which his music for Coming Through the Rye was written and recorded. Jay lives with his family in Hartland, VT.

HEATH McNEASE [composer] - McNease grew up in the sticks of Georgia. Widely known as a rapper, his repertoire is influenced by groups as diverse as Bone Thugs-n-Harmony and Simon and Garfunkle and an impossibly wide range of musical genre from blues and folk to classic rock and gangster rap and classical. He plays colleges, bars, hip hop clubs, coffee shops, churches and festivals. Since his first album, The Heath McNease Fan Club Meets Tonight in 2007, he has released over 8 others and wrote and starred in the film Fort Wayne. It was the music from that film that caught the attention of Sadwith. Heath is most often on the road, traveling from venue to venue.

TEN MOST FREQUENTLY ASKED QUESTIONS OF FILMMAKER JIM SADWITH

1. How long did it take to make this film?

Depends on what you're really asking. We started prep in early September 2014, began shooting October 19 and wrapped 23 days later. Post-production lasted until mid-May. So 9 months to make this baby? How fitting.

BUT I started raising financing seven months earlier -- Valentine's Day 2014. Adding those months that makes a total 16 months.

BUT it took 2 months to study up and write the business plan. That makes 18 months. BUT it took 2 months to write the script or adapt it from a book I'd written. So 20 months. BUT it took 10 months to write the book. So 2 1/2 years.

BUT I've thought about this story and written articles relating it and have been interviewed about it since it happened in October 1969, so 46 years is as accurate a number as any.

2. Why did you decide to do it now?

Friends and relatives have been asking for years "When are you going to do a movie about your Salinger story?" But I've always had a problem imagining that this story was big enough for a film. Part of that, I suppose, is just that it's largely autobiographical which, to me, seemed to diminish its size and appeal. But a couple of years ago I came to a point where I wanted to do something different - and had always wanted to direct a feature - so I decided to dedicate myself to writing the book and figured after the book was published I would then parlay that into the movie. But while writing it I learned that I am a screenwriter, not a novelist without the patience to write paragraphs or pages of scene description every time you enter a new place or meet a new person or have a new thought. I realized that basically I was writing a screenplay in longhand and really just wanted to skip all the description stuff and get to dialogue and action. So I decided to adapt the book and get on with it.

3. What influenced your visual style on this film?

I prefer not to get in the way of the actors and the story. In that way, I've been influenced by directors like Sydney Lumet and Sydney Pollack. In this film I wanted to feel like we were following these kids, a fly on the wall. So other than in the opening credit sequence -- I kept the camera almost entirely handheld and tried not to overuse cranes and dolly's. What may seem contradictory to that is having Jamie break the fourth wall in the first act. I actually wrote this before House of Cards aired so I was not trying to copy it. I was interested in trying to find a filmic equivalent to one of the things that made The Catcher in the Rye so iconic, and why it resonates with so many readers. Holden Caulfield, in the middle of a scene, suddenly speaks to the reader and comments on how so-and-so is a phony or how he himself is a madman. I used the device when I adapted the book for the high school play. So I decided to employ it in the beginning of the film where Jamie has no one he can really talk to at school. Later, once he meets DeeDee (and then Salinger), I felt the device would pull us out of the drama, so I let it go except for a glance at the camera towards the end. In an earlier cut I had Jamie turn to camera for a final speech, but - while being a nice bookend - it took many viewers out of the moment.

Another example of letting the story dictate the style is the choice of locations and timing of the shoot. The script says this is an October story. It may have been peak foliage when I actually went to see Salinger, but the colors of peak foliage would be too vibrant and pretty for what Jamie is going through. I felt that past peak better reflects the isolation and loneliness of his running away and also underscores the secluded life of Salinger.

4. How did you find Alex?

I was determined to cast teenagers. I didn't feel that actors in their 20's could capture the innocence and freshness I wanted in Jamie and DeeDee. We had a casting director on the west coast - Pagano-Manwiller - who put out a worldwide casting call. Alex Wolff, a 16 yr. old New Yorker, posted an audition, and we were intrigued. Everyone around me was in love with him and wanted me to pull the trigger. But I wanted to audition him in person. I went to NY and met Alex in the CAA offices. He was so passionate about the role he brought in a tattered, dog-eared edition of The Catcher in the Rye that his grandfather had given his father to read back in the late sixties and his father had saved to give to him to read just a year before. Alex nailed the audition and turned out to be the perfect Jamie. I had not been looking for someone who looked like me back in 1969, but after Alex landed the role I found some old pictures of me in high school. We put one on the bulletin board next to Alex's head shot and the resemblance just blew people's minds - most of all Alex's.

5. How did you find Stefania?

Stefania Owen, also 16 yrs. old, posted an audition from New Zealand. We'd been looking for weeks and weeks for a DeeDee. In the script there's a line about DeeDee being perfect to play Phoebe Caulfield, 10 yrs. old, in Jamie's play. So I was hoping to find an actress that had the quality of a 16 yr. old but could play even younger. Most actresses in their teens are trying to look and act in their 20's. Needless to say we were getting discouraged. As the clock was ticking down, I was walking past Debi Manwiller's desk as she was playing Stefania's audition on her computer, and I shouted, "Oh, my God! This is it!" It seemed too good to be true. Realizing a personal audition with a New Zealander was not possible, I decided to Skype with Stefania and probably was a nervous as she, because I wanted so badly for it to work out. She won me over even more online

6. How did you land Chris Cooper?

In 1991 I cast Chris in -- In Broad Daylight - a movie about a town bully who was shot dead in broad daylight in front of 30 witnesses - every one of whom claimed not to have seen the shooter. Chris had the part of the salt of the earth highway patrolman who dared go up against the bully. I loved Chris from the start -- serious, soft-spoken, a gentleman, a pro. Anyway, I still had his home number in my address book (I still have all my old address books). I figured I'd give that number a call and see if it was actually his - 23 years later! I got a generic mechanical voicemail saying, "Please leave a message." After leaving a long rambling message asking if he remembered me and telling him briefly about the project I ended saying, "If this isn't Chris - sorry." A day or two later my phone rang, and the caller ID read 'Chris Cooper.' I almost fell over. We spoke and hearing his calm, soothing voice - I kept saying, "It's so good to hear your voice, it's so good to hear your voice." And it was. I mean he's done dozens of incredible movies since I worked with him, and won an Academy Award - and he was responding enthusiastically to me and to my story!

7. What made you choose Virginia to shoot in?

We needed a location that could play both Pennsylvania farmlands and the mountains of New Hampshire. We also needed to shoot in a state that had film production incentives. Our producer, Teddy Grennan, suggested the Shenandoah Valley outside of Charlottesville. I checked it out and was blown away by not only the look but also the friendliness and enthusiasm of everyone. What sealed the deal was a place I saw that could be Crampton Prep: The Woodberry Forest School. When I drove on campus I saw every single shot I had written in the script: the acres and acres of athletic fields; the gorgeous chapel; the main building and dining room; the dorms. There was hardly an angle that would be wrong for the film. Plus it had a lake, which we needed! Even the students were perfect! They all had dark blue blazers, khakis and really long hair! This was a gift from the film gods with a bow wrapped around it. Finally, in Virginia, autumn progresses slowly -- perfect for the continuity a film needs. It was truly perfect.

8. How did you find that milkweed field?

46 year ago when I was at boarding school, I was riding horses with the town girl who (along with my wife) is the inspiration for DeeDee. It was near sunset, and we came upon a milkweed field. We galloped through it and created this mind-blowing blizzard of milkweeds -- one of the most indelible images of my life. I promised myself even then, it would be in a movie of mine someday. But I didn't rely on luck or fate. When I knew we were going to make the film I went through the fields in my area and took around 350 plants (there are zillions of them which farmers try to mow down before they go to seed) and drove them 500 miles to Virginia. Crew members, who I was meeting for the first time, thought I was rather strange. The stalks sat in the art department for two months drying while we were in prep. Finally, the week before shooting the scene, I drove all weekend until I found a field that I thought would work. The pods - now dried -- were wrapped in aluminum foil to keep them from bursting and filling up the art department and our cars with milkweed. The stalks were wired to green bamboo stakes and transported to the field. Then the staked stalks were driven into the ground, foil removed and voila!

9. Did you ever keep in touch with Salinger? What do you think he would feel about the movie?

I wrote Salinger a number of thank you notes over the years. I wrote and thanked him when I got into Harvard (a B student, I got in basically on the novelty of the story that I had searched for, found and talked to Salinger). I wrote him a thanking him and telling him I finally did something of my own when my first movie got made with George Burns and Robby Benson. I wrote thanking him when I won my Emmy. But I never heard back and figured I was harassing him so I stopped. I don't know how he would feel about the movie. He jealously guarded his privacy so he might not appreciate his being portrayed. On the other hand, after I saw the first cut, I realized the film is a love letter to "The Catcher in the Rye," so who knows. I think we captured the man I met quite accurately.

10. What was the most difficult part of making the movie?

Production-wise, finding Salinger's house. It needed to be in a field on a hill surrounded by woods, but not in them, as Holden said, so it would be sunny as hell all of the time. It had to feel 'Salingerish' as Jamie describes: "someplace where one of the most famous writers in the world might choose to live if he wanted to hide from everyone. Remote not bleak. Beautiful but untouched." Practically, the house needed to have a 60's look with a deck on the second story, so Jamie would have to shout up at Salinger. This house was so hard to find we placed ads promising $1000 to the person who found it. We locked it down less than a week before we shot.

The hardest part of all was raising money. Before this film the last thing I had tried selling were magazine subscriptions in elementary school. I knew nothing about financing an independent film, business plans, LLC's or equity and shares. So I spent a lot of time learning online and invested about two hundred dollars buying books and resources and moved forward one investor at a time. There was so much rejection and hard work that often I wanted to give up. My wife, Nerissa, kept saying, "You are going to finish this. You're not going to give up." I have her to thank for getting me to the finish line.
